QUANTLAB

STRATEGIC GROWTH DIVISION

SALES PARTNER TRAINING

CONFIDENTIAL & PROPRIETARY // THE QUANTLAB METHOD

MODULE 01

Mindset & Prep

The "Consultant, Not Salesman" Frame

At QuantLab, we do not sell widgets; we engineer business solutions. If you approach a prospect trying to "pitch a website," you commoditize yourself immediately. You are a Digital Growth Consultant. Your goal isn't to take their money—it's to diagnose inefficiencies and prescribe software that generates massive ROI.

The Salesman Frame

- "Do you need a new website?"
- Talks about features & code
- Chases the prospect
- Accepts "we're fine"

The Consultant Frame

- "Where is your business bleeding money?"
- Talks about automation & revenue
- Diagnoses the prospect
- Challenges "we're fine"

Knowing Your Weapon (Our Service)

You must have absolute conviction that what QuantLab builds will revolutionize their business. We don't just build nice-looking pages; we build systems that.

- Capture Leads: Funnels that actually convert traffic.
- Automate Ops: Internal dashboards, automated invoicing, CRM syncing.
- Build Authority: Premium aesthetics that let them charge premium prices.

💡 Pre-Call Recon

Never enter a conversation blind. Spend 5 minutes on their current site and LinkedIn. Look for the "cracks": Is the site slow? Is it mobile-responsive? Is there a clear path to book an appointment? Bring these cracks up immediately.

MODULE 02

Breaking the Ice

The Cold Opener (In-Person / Phone)

When you interrupt someone's day, you have 5 seconds to prove you aren't wasting their time. Acknowledge the interruption, drop the pitch, and hook them with a hyper-specific observation.

AVOID

"Hi, I'm from QuantLab. We build custom websites and software. Are you looking to upgrade your digital presence?"

SCRIPT

"Hey [Name], I know you weren't expecting my call. I'll be brief—I was just on your site trying to figure out how a new client books a consultation with you, and I realized the process is pretty broken. Have you noticed a drop in lead flow recently?"

LinkedIn & Email Outreach

Keep it shockingly short. Business owners ignore paragraphs. Use the "Pattern Interrupt" framework.

SCRIPT

Subject: Your onboarding flow

Hey [Name],

Looked at your current setup. The work you guys do at [Company] is premium, but the customer experience on the site doesn't match that level.

We build the backend software for firms like yours to automate intake and intake billing. Worth a quick 5-min chat this Thursday?

Building Instant Rapport

Rapport isn't about talking about the weather or sports. Professional rapport is built through competence and empathy. Show them you understand the brutal reality of running their specific type of business.

SCRIPT

"Most founders in your space I talk to are completely bogged down in admin work instead of actually closing deals. Is that what you're seeing right now?"

MODULE 03

Discovery: Identifying Needs

Discovery is where the sale is won or lost. If you do this right, they will sell themselves. We use a modified SPIN (Situation, Problem, Implication, Need-Payoff) framework.

1. The Situation (Current State)

Find out exactly how they operate right now. Let them explain their broken processes.

Q: Walk me through exactly what happens right now when a new lead hits your website.

Q: How are you currently tracking projects and communicating with clients?

Q: What software stack are you patching together right now?

2. The Problem (Finding the Pain)

Now, poke the bruise. Make them admit that the current way is flawed.

Q: It sounds like you have to manually enter data three times. How often are details slipping through the cracks?

Q: Your site looks a bit dated compared to your competitors. Has anyone ever mentioned that?

Q: What's the biggest bottleneck stopping you from doubling your volume right now?

3. The Implication (Twisting the Knife)

They know they have a problem. Now you must make them realize how much it's costing them.

Q: If your team is spending 15 hours a week doing manual data entry... what is that costing you in payroll every month?

Q: When a high-ticket client sees your current site and goes with a competitor, how much revenue did you just lose?

Q: How long can you sustain this manual process before the team burns out?

MODULE 04

Current Spending & Budgeting

Calculating the Cost of Inaction (COI)

Before you pitch a monthly retainer or a high-ticket build, the prospect must understand that doing nothing is actively costing them money.

SCRIPT

> "You mentioned you're losing about 2 deals a month because your lead process is slow. What's your average client worth? $5,000? So this broken process is literally costing you $10,000 every single month. Does that sound right?"

Once they agree to those numbers, your $1k/mo or $3k/mo retainer suddenly looks incredibly cheap.

Asking About Budget Without Being Awkward

Amateurs get scared of the money talk. Consultants embrace it. Anchor high to gauge their reaction.

SCRIPT

> "To build out the type of automated dashboard and premium site we're talking about, our typical engagements range from $3,000 to $10,000 depending on scope, plus ongoing support. Is that completely out of the realm of reality for you right now?"

If they balk, you down-sell to a smaller monthly plan. If they don't blink, you know you have room to build something incredible.

💡 Framing the Monthly Retainer

Never call it a "maintenance fee." Call it a "Dedicated Engineering Partner Plan." Reiterate that a junior in-house dev costs $80k/year. We give them an elite team for a fraction of that, fully managed.

MODULE 05

Bringing It All Together

Connecting Pain to Solution (The Pitch)

Don't just list features. Map our features directly to the specific pains they admitted to in Discovery.

SCRIPT

"You told me you're losing 10 hours a week on manual intake. The custom portal we build for you is going to completely automate that. A client fills out the form, and the system automatically generates an invoice and creates a project file. We give you those 10 hours back."

Handling Core Objections

Objection: "It's too expensive."

SCRIPT

"I understand it's an investment. But we just agreed your current setup is costing you $5,000 a month in lost deals. This system pays for itself in exactly 45 days. Why delay fixing a leak in your boat?"

Objection: "We use WordPress/Wix, it's fine."

SCRIPT

SCRIPT

"If you want to stay a small business, Wix is fine. If you want to scale to 8 figures, you need custom infrastructure. We build the digital assets that allow you to scale without breaking. Are you ready to scale?"

The Trial Close & The Ask

Take their temperature before asking for the credit card.

SCRIPT

The Trial Close: "Based on everything we've looked at today, do you feel confident that this new architecture will resolve the bottleneck in your sales team?"

The Ask: "Great. The next step is simple. We get the initial deposit processed, and we kick off the strategy boarding session next Tuesday. Does Visa or Mastercard work best for you?"

Once you ask for the business, shut up. The first person to speak loses.
